THE RUGGED ROAD

This world is but the rugged road Which leads us to the Bright Abode Of Peace Above;

So let us choose that Narrow Way Which leads no traveller's foot astray From Realms of Love.—Longfellow.

I BELIEVE IN GOD

HY not believe in Him? We have heard the usual arguments over and over again, weak ones and strong ones. Sometimes they impressed us, and quite often they depressed us, but at any rate they always made us think. In thinking, we looked backward; not the look of defeatism but the look of appraisal. We saw life over a period, long or short as the case may be. That period may have been a broad survey of life lived as a whole, with the interest perhaps in centering in our particular status to date. Then again, the period could be viewed with the highlights standing out in bold relief. Those highlights make a great impression upon our thinking and our living. What are they?

Usually they are things that have remained in the conscious realm of our thinking, that is, they are remembered instantly; perhaps we should say we have never forgotten them. The incidents may have occurred long years ago but it is as if they happened only yesterday; they are like neighbors living alongside us-possibly closer than that—we see them every day. There are, of course, a great many other events, of less importance perhaps, and these have settled to the bottom of our sub-conscious realm. They lie there quite forgotten until some incident or other brings them up; we then become conscious of them, for a while at least.

T is important to note that these highlights, are in the main, very simple things. Things complicated or complex, no matter how greatly they impress us at the time, seem not to enter in upon us deeply enough to us. What they did was very simple or very small; but it was an act so devoid of selfishness that it flooded our hearts with an overwhelming sense of gratitude. It literally beamed in upon us in one of our dark hours, scattering our gloom. And to-day, that act is one of life's highlights. It shines on; its light is never extinguished; it is never for an instant forgotten.

Then, it may have been something intangible that took hold of us; the faith of honest sincere persons, those who believed in God. It seemed to us that they lived only to please Him and to love Him. Whether they suffered or prospered mattered not, and so long as they lived in His will, all was well. They said little but lived much; a full, happy, trusting life of faith, and the goodness of it shone from their eyes. Over the years we have met such as these, more often than not, in life's lowly stations.

THEN again, we have met some who, because they were endowed by nature with keen intellect, sought by study and training to develop the gifts God had given them. They have lived their lives in an atmosphere of cold and emotionless materialism, where nothing was accepted or believed unless proved, and where the fact of conscious faith never appeared in equation or text-book. Only those whose hearts have made room for Christ can reach true development in such surroundings. When, however, under these circumstances, a young student declares himself in this manner:

"Personally I believe in God. I believe religion to be the closest connection possible with God. I think it is beautiful. I think that moral action is commendable.

SUNDAY: He giveth power to the faint.—Isa. 40:29.

Our Father, unto us, cumbered with fears and with fainting faith, manifest anew Thy power. Lead us to the steps whereby we may mount upward.

MONDAY: Why are you downcast? If your heart is honest, you would surely look bright.—Gen. 4:6, 7 (Moffatt).

Psychiatrists who treat depressed people recognize that often despair people recognize that often despair springs from inner moods, such as dishonesty, insincerity, or impurity. To bring hopefulness they suggest integrating the whole life with some THURSDAY: Have I not commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.—Joshua 1:9.

Our text clearly shows that though Joshua was given a mighty mission, he was also given courage sufficient for the task, and a promise of the fellowship of God Himself

FRIDAY: But seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Matt. 6:33.

Can we give the Kingdom of God first place and survive? Not in our own strength alone; we must join our faculties of body, mind and soul with the Divine. Like Paul, we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us

THIS PROMISE IS FOR YOU

HE conditions of Salvation are few, but all-important. They are unalterable. I They apply to every one who will acknowledge his sinful state. They apply to young and old, rich and poor-to everybody, for "all have sinned."

First and foremost, sorrow for sin is necessary, this including the giving up of wrongdoing and the rectifying (so far as possible) of wrongs done. Faith in Christ's atonement for sin, and the claiming of citizenship in the Kingdom of God complete

If you will call upon the name of the Lord at this moment, this promise is for you: "Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." You simply cannot go on existing without Jesus. YOU NEED HIM!

to take up their permanent abode; either in our minds or in our personalities. They have not become neighbors, that is, they have not moved in next door nor upstairs; they live at the end of the street or possibly around the corner. We see them only occasionally and we hardly ever call on them.

Things like kindness, love and sacrifice are never forgotten. Perhaps someone we knew was very kind BLESSED are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

BLESSED are they which are persecuted for right-eousness' sake: for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

BLESSED are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake.—Matt. 5:3-11.

I think that basic (not added to-as has often happened) teachings of Christ are the finest ever to arise on earth; and that they are manifestations of eternal laws. I think, in fact I know, that without rational, moral, and aesthetic outgrowths of religion, the world would be in chaos"—there can be no need of argument in favor of a personal God for only from a God-directed life can a declaration of this kind, come.

Many thousands join likewise in this simple declaration of their faith, "I believe in God."

Jome of God's .....Mysteries

"Ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee. Or speak to the earth and it shall teach thee, and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee."—Job 12:7, 8.

N unbeliever once said, "I will A believe only what I can under-stand; none of that 'mystery stuff' for me."

He was asked to explain this problem: How is it possible for a black cow to eat green grass which makes white milk and churns yellow

Can you explain this mystery of God? Note some other mysteries of His creation:

His creation:
Consider the remarkable transformation that takes place when a caterpillar (an upholstered worm) encases itself in its home-made casket and is changed into a beautiful butterfly. Its hair is changed to scales—a million to the square inch; the many legs of the caterpillar become the six legs of the butterfly;

 $===B_{V}====$ Dr. Walter L. Wilson

the yellow becomes a beautiful red; the crawling instinct becomes a flythe crawing instinct, ing instinct.

Thus will God take the life of a sinner and transform it until it glows with the beauty of the Lord and is fragrant with the graces of heaven.

A handful of sand is deposited by Great heat is applied from beneath and ponderous weight from above until, when it is found by man, it has been miraculously changed into a beautiful, fiery opal.

Transformed Souls, Renewed Hearts

God takes a handful of clay, de-God takes a handful of clay, deposits it deep in the earth, applies great heat beneath it, and when it is found by man it has become a beautiful amethyst, prized highly. God takes a handful of black carbon, plants it deep in the bowels of the earth, treats it with heat below, presses it with rocks of the moun-presses it with rocks of the mountains above, and transforms it into a glorious diamond fit for a king's crown.

As God performs these wonderful miracles in nature, He also can transform the souls of men and re-new their hearts if they only trust fully in Christ Jesus, the Lord of Note the marvellous accuracy of God in His operations in the three kingdoms of the earth—the animal, the vegetable and the mineral king-doms. This is apparent in the hatch-ing of eggs, for example:

The eggs of the potato bug hatch in 7 days; those of the canary in 14 days; those of the barnyard hen in 21 days; those of ducks and geese in 28 days; those of the parrot and the ostrich in 42 days.

God knows how to regulate nature. Only the One who made you can successfully direct you. Only the One who made your brain and your heart can successfully guide them to a profitable end.

Four Fulcrums

God's wisdom is seen in the structure of the elephant. The four legs of this great beast bend forward in the same direction. No other quadruped is so made. God planned that this animal should have a huge body, too large to live on two legs. For this reason He gave it four fulcrums so that it could rise from the ground easily.

The horse rises from the ground on its two front legs first.

The norse rises from the ground on its two front legs first.

The cow rises from the ground with its two hind legs first. How wise the Lord is in all His works of creation!

God's wisdom is revealed in His arrangements of sections and segments as well as in the number of grains.

Each watermelon has an even number of stripes on the rind. Each orange has an even number number of stripes on the rind.

Each orange has an even number of segments.
Each ear of corn has an even number of rows.
Each stalk of wheat has an even number of grains.
The waves of the sea roll in on the shore twenty-six to the minute in all kinds of weather.
All grains are found in even numbers on the stalks, and the Lord specified thirtyfold, sixtyfold and an hundredfold—all even numbers.
God has caused all flowers to blossom at certain specified times during the day, so that Linneus, the great botanist, once said that if he had a conservatory containing the right kind of soil, moisture and temperature he could tell the time of the day or night by the flowers that were open and those that were closed.

that it will carry out His purposes and plans. Only the life given over to the care of the Lord is safe.

Another mystery as yet unsolved by man is this: God causes the limb of a tree to grow straight out from the trunk for a distance of forty, fifty or sixty feet, with no other an-chorage than fifteen or eighteen inches of fibres which lose them-selves in the trunk of the tree. No human being has discovered how to apply this principle in the construcapply this principle in the construction of buildings or bridges.

A Garden of Graces

I know only that God can take your life—drab, useless and fruit-less—and transform it into a beautiful garden of the sweetest graces for His glory. He will do this for you, if you will trust your life to Him!

HIDDEN IN A TREE

ONE day a student out on his father's ranch in California was reading under an old pine tree. He reading under an old pine tree. He noticed a peculiar scar on the tree and being curious, he took off a piece of bark with his knife and ran the blade into the tree. There he found embedded a small leather-covered Bible containing the date 1849. Apparently it had been left in a notch cut in the tree to form a little shelf, and the mighty tree had grown around it.

The place to hide the Bible is not in a tree, but in the heart. As precious metal is concealed in the hills and mountains, so gems of precious metal is concealed in the hills and mountains, so gems of truth are hidden in the Bible. We are to search for them and store them in our minds for future use.

The second step by which these people overcame was by the word of their testimony. They were told to witness for their Lord.

And Why Not?

And Why Not?

In The Army we encourage our comrades to witness for God. And why not? The world about us is unafraid to tell which side of the camp it is on. The baseball fan, and the hocky enthusiast cheer loudly for their team. The man of the world frequents the places of his favor without fear, and often tells his experiences over the garden wall. Should we, the children of the Living God, who have experienced the miracle of the New Birth be backward in witnessing? We have passed from death unto life, and have the most worthwhile story of all.

One of the things which has proved a great hindrance to the claiming of the Blessing of a Clean Heart is that many people are guided too much by the old saying, "God will not do for us what we can do for ourselves." I believe that in many cases God is waiting to do what we have been, in our small strength, trying to do for many years ourselves. But how can He work, when we keep striving? Will you not, just now, "let go and let God." He is able to do abundantly above all that we can ask or think.

above all that we can ask or think.
Plainly stated, Holiness is just this: "Sell out and let Christ move this: "Sell out and let Christ more in." When a young man came to Jesus, many years ago, evidently dissatisfied with his experience, though he had kept all the law, Jesus said to him, "Go and sell that thou hast . . . and follow Me." (Matthew 19:21.) But the young man turned away sorrowful, for he had great possessions.

-SIMPLICITY AND GODLY SINCERITY.

Are the Keynotes of the True Christian Life

THE grandest character that ever trod the earth, lived a life of extreme simplicity. The greatest characters in all history are those who have lived simple lives. Simplicity in religion is that state of grace where the whole moral nature is clarified and so freed from self-will and error, and a mixture of carnal things, as to give a straightforwardness, a transparency, an equipoise to the inner life of the soul and the outer life of conduct.

What Many Prefer

Many people do not really prefer the life of simplicity, for they want something exciting, something more showy, more attractive, more startsnowy, more attractive, more start-ling, and something that will make quicker impression on the senses. The true Christian who seeks to live a life of perfect simplicity desires to avoid self-praise, putting on airs, and all drawing of attention to himself. He does not desire to appear to others except as he is in reality in the sight of God.

The Apostle Paul declared that his rejoicing was in having a conscience of simplicity and godly sincerity. His joy did not depend upon the success of his work, or the number of his friends, or what other people of his friends, or what other people thought of him; but it was a secret fountain flowing up in his own heart, the consciousness that he was freed from guile, from self-will, from hardness, from bitterness, that his soul had been melted into Divine love, and that he wanted nothing but the favor of God and the privilege of doing God's will in God's way, and led by the Divine Spirit. That was his joy.

There is also a simplicity in ex-

There is also a simplicity in experience, as where Paul says, "let love be without dissimulation"; that is, without counterfeit, without being mixed up, without evil passions, or pride, or ambitions. The whole world is full of dissimulation; that is, something put on to make it look different from what it really is.

In furniture and houses we have common wood painted to resemble mahogany or else common wood that is veneered with a thin layer of mahogany. At the hotel tables they have mock turtle soup; that is soup to taste like turtle though made of something else. In dry goods they have an article that remade of something else. In dry goods they have an article that resembles silk and feels like it. And so in conduct, in business, in manners, in religion, in a thousand things in this world there is a dissimulation, something put on to make something else resemble the genuine article.

But God would have His people delight in true honesty, and sincerity. He would have simplicity in prayer, in service and in living. He would have them walk before Him with an eye single to His glory.

School was to be a place of Christian education. His object was to form Christian men.

PART TWO OF A STIRRING MISSIONARY SERIAL

By MATILDA HATCHER

Much of the romance of the Mission Field has yet to be written, and the exploits of exploring Salvationists of various nationalities on The Army's frontiers furnish acceptable reading at all times. The accompanying story, written by a leading Salvation Army author, never before published, records stirring missionary incidents in the Far East.

CHAPTER IV A TESTIMONY MEETING

N all Salvation Army Leper Colonies testimony meetings are frequently held, and troubled souls are encouraged when they hear how the Lord has helped someone else when passing through similar experiences.

when passing through similar experiences.

The Treasurer, whose testimony is always a help, we have met twice hefore. This is Kie Tjien, the fragile Chinese boy for whom his family could not do enough—also the Local Officer who welcomed us on Sunday morning.

Officer who welcomed us on Sunday morning.

When, at the age of thirteen, he found leprosy appearing on the lobes of his ears, the lad determined to go away. His family tried to keep him at home, but his love for them made him insist on the painful separation; and sadly the father made the best arrangements possible for the journey. First came a boat-trip when he travelled for ten days as a deck passenger, being put on his honor not to move from the one place assigned to him. Then one hundred miles by train and twenty miles in a bambooo "ark" brought a sad and lonely youth to the Colony. He had a wonderful story to tell. "I will do my best to make clear the works of God, engraved as something which cannot be effaced, in me who was formerly a heathen," he said.

"When I was a child of five God."

"When I was a child of five, God put in my heart spiritual longings, which caused me to weep without control. My parents taught me of a Living God—a stern Judge who served purished the clightest misverely punished the slightest mistakes. The thought of such a God could not satisfy my soul; I longed for a God of love whom I might love in return.

through that book, God saved him. I shall keep on praying until all my family kneel at the Cross of Calvary.

"I wish to express my thanks for the interest taken in us by The Salvation Army, and on behalf of all the comrades to say how grateful we are to The Army. If it had not taken our interests to heart, what would have become of us, spiritually as well as physically?"

When the Treasurer ceased speaking a chorus was started:

How easily that might happen to any one of us, was recently brought forcibly to my attention by my doctors. The folding that I must be very tor, who told me that I must be very careful from now on.

God, working through The Salvation Army, set my feet on the road that leads to Him and Eternal Life. "Too little and too late" might have been the sentence passed on me, a trembling soul. But God has forgiven me for my years of wickedness. Oh, me for my years of wickedness. Oh, the shame and regret that floods me as I think of all the wasted years, years that a loving Heavenly Father had given me, and which I, an ungrateful, wretched sinner, used in the service of Satan, His enemy.

I am not afraid to die, but my daily prayer is that God, in His mercy, will let me live for some years yet; that my works and example may in some measure atone for the harm I may have done.

As to my doctor's orders, these will be obeyed at least in one respect that possibly he did not think of; and that is my relationship to God and my fellow men. I shall try to live the balance of my life so that God will not be ashamed I am one of His children, and those who have known me will be better for having done so.

HAT Christian has not at one time or another been perplexed by adverse circumstances arising in his life, and more or less affecting his spiritual life?

or less affecting his spiritual life?

One of the stages in this experience is represented in the Book of Job, where a good man is pictured as suffering from catastrophes he did not deserve. How could that be reconciled with a good purpose at work in the world! The conclusion was that no events can be taken at their face value and judged by the present, for it remains to be seen what the future will make out of them. No one knows the future—only God. Therefore a man always reaches a point where he cannot know, and where he must simply trust in that which spans the past, present, and future. past, present, and future.

past, present, and future.

Such an outlook is confirmed in the lives of all of us when we have seen good and unpredictable results following long after events which we did not like or rightly measure. If that happens sometimes, it may happen beyond our powers to guess all along the line. We thus are never through with our past because more meaning than we imagine is being created out of what we seem to have left behind. we seem to have left behind.

A Radio Direction-Finding Device Five Times More Accurate Than Radar

RADIO direction - finding de-A vice five times more accurate than Radar is to be mass-produced and operated throughout the world as an all-British enterprise.

Soon the seas, the skies and even the desert-wastes will be criss-crossed with invisible radio strands enabling ships, aircraft and desert convoys to determine their position within a few hundred yards, in fair weather or foul, at any time of the day or night. Radar, that other great day or night. Radar, that other great British invention, enables the operator to locate approaching objects, whereas the Decca Navigator tells him his own position and marks out a true course.

The Decca system needs no technical skills only the needs no nical skill; only the ability to read two dials and relate the readings to the chart provided. Recent tests have proved its accuracy to within 200 yards at a range of 300 miles from base; and even up to distances of 1,500 miles—half-way across the Atlantic—a ship's position can be guaranteed to within half a mile in daylight and two miles after dark.

The basic principle lies in the use of pairs of synchronised long-wave transmitters on land and in measuring the time difference between the reception of the radio waves from each. This is done automatically in the Decca receiver, and the energy received, when "stepped up," operates two dials.

Explained simply, if two signals are picked up exactly simultaneously, the two transmitters must be equidistant from the receiver. The receiver must therefore be somewhere along a straight line which receiver must therefore be somewhere along a straight line which cuts at right angles midway across a line joining the two transmitters. If there is the slightest divergence from the straight line, the waves will arrive "out of phase," and by measuring these phase-differences a ship's course can be gauged with extreme accuracy. And if the ship simultaneously picks up transmissions from a second pair of land stations, not only the course, but the position on the map, can be closely determined.

The system of charting is an integral part of the invention and extremely ingenious. The transmitters radiate pure undulated continuous waves, and as these spread out through the ether in a series of ever-widening rings, the points of their intersection each give an exact location and, taken altogether, produce a space "pattern."

Charts are issued in which each intersection is pin-pointed and numbered. At the start of a voyage the dials are set to the numbers for the place of departure; the receiver, operating on one aerial, does the rest. The needles on the dials rotate according to the changing wave phases, the number of rotations be-tate according to the changing wave phases, the number of rotations being marked on the indicator in units, tens and hundreds.

The numbers have then only to

When the membrane is irritated by dust or inflammation, or other causes, a danger signal is automatically flashed to the brain, which then orders a sneeze to clear away the foreign matter. Sunday's venue was the Royal Tennis Court Hall. In the morning 4,000 people listened to the General's call to a deeper spiritual life. Again the Mercy-Seat was quickly filled.

That is the situation as we see it in the world to-day. It should cause the gravest alarm in the heart of every right-thinking man and woman, but the appalling thing is that there is no alarm.

Like Simple, the world slumbers on, saying, "I see no danger," while all the time the clouds of heaven are black with the wrath of God.

The General was enabled to grip his great audience and many were quickly at the Mercy-Seat with tears. A hundred seekers crowned this meeting.

Officers' children shyly invited the General to a little refreshment with them, and at a late hour he had a special word for these sons and daughters of the regiment.

Swedish Salvationists' avidity and receptivity were again shown in the filled Blasieholm Church for a Holiness meeting on Monday afternoon, after which the General broadcast to Sweden.

The General thanked the Swedish Salvationists for "starting me off as General by launching me into the deep water of your loyalty and affection." Half an hour of song directed by Major Paul Anefelt was broadcast.

Following the General's visit to Oslo, unprecedented crowds eight times filled the Calmeyergaten Mission Hall for the Norwegian Congress, for which this building was used for the first time since the liberation.

More than 300 seekers were re-corded. Lieut.-Commissioner W. B. Davey and Beekhuis were a means of great inspiration and blessing.

THE THIN RED LINE Of Spiritual Objective

IN addition to his public welcome gatherings, the General is quickly meeting the groups of Officers and employees attached to various Salvation Army Headquarters in and around London.

"The welcomes I have received," he told the Women's Social Head-quarters staff, gathered in the Florence Booth Hall, "though humbling, are also inspiring, when one realizes what they imply. We depend upon each other.

sculery maids for the world and must ever keep our central objective in view."

To the staff of Salvationist Publishing and Supplies Ltd., he said: "We must see the thin red line of our spiritual objective running through all our work."

At Judd Street, where the staff received the General with flags and an original welcome chorus, a representative speaker said that not only did they supply The Salvation Army fighting-line but they were in it themselves, and recounted the impressive number of Local Officers' positions, etc., held by Judd Street people. Commissioner J. Lewis led the welcome.

Greeted with a trumpet fanfare on the lawn of The Salvation Army Assurance Society's premises. Emmer Green, Reading, the General met some 500 of the Head Office staff and wives gathered in the shade of the old cedar. It would have been his first British garden welcome had not the fickle weather driven the assembly to one of the huts before proceedings had gone very far.

The closer contact, however, gave the gathering a still more intimate character, of which the General took full advantage.

THE West Central Hotel, Southampton Row, London, which the Canadian Red Shield Services put to excellent use as a Leave Centre during the war, has been opened as a family hotel, as part of Men's Social Work development in the British Territory.

Visitors to the great metropolis, who find accommodation a hard problem, will welcome the facilities thus afforded by The Army. Ninety persons can be looked after. There are sitting, recreation, dining and reading and writing rooms, well furnished, with single and a few double bedrooms.

Major and Mrs. Tewkesbury are in charge. The existing staff has con-in charge. The existing staff has continued to serve.

A farewell gathering recently took place at the Hotel, with Major Wm. Jolly, Senior Supervisor, Cana-dian War Services, presiding. The dian dian War Services, presiding. The Major paid a husband's warm and proud tribute to the work of Mrs. Jolly, who has been mainly responsible for the immense hospitality dispensed at "West Central." Commissioner Blowers, first Chairman of the Canadian War Services Finance Board, and Brigadier Ware, Under-Secretary, International Headquarters, also spoke.

"WE had strawberries, cream and jelly, and money under our plates!" was the chorused jubilation of scores of underprivileged children who were treated to a Saturday afternoon Outing on Hayes Common, Kent, Eng., by Bromley Citadel comrades.

A bunch of wild roses was handed to the Corps Officer by a little girl to mark her gratitude. Another put a strawberry in the safe keeping of an Officer, stating: "It's for me Mum, and I guess Dad'll want a bite of it as well."

HE FOUND A WIFE

A N interesting good-out-ou-evin story comes from Overschie, a little village near Rotterdam, Hol-land, where Salvation Army Offi-cers, during visitation of the peo-ple, discovered a neglected old N interesting good-out-of-evil

They began to attend Salvation Army meetings. A son got converted. He was a widower with three children. But he is lonely no longer for, married to an Amsterdam Congress Hall Songster, he finds Salvation and all it has brought him, as good for his family as it was for his old father.

INDIAN "CHALLENGERS"

OWING to the absence of the Territorial Commander in London the Commissioning of the N. India "Challenger" Cadets was conducted by the Chief Secretary, Lieut.-Colonel Fauj Singh (Sheard).

Under the leadership of Major and Mrs. Walker and staff, the Cadets made a constant witness to Christ in the streets of Lahore, holding regular meetings in the famous Anarkali and continuing during the worst periods of communal unrest. They sold over 5,000 Scripture portions.

Boom marches were undertaken. The Cadets received a great welcome from the villagers. Many souls were won in these campaigns.

LAPLAND RELIEF

VEHICLES sent from London for V relief work in war devastated areas of Lapland are now in operation. One is being used as an ambulance in the Imaru parish, where there is still much danger from unexploded mines.

Major Matha Soini, Chief Salvation Army Relief Officer, reports the distribution of clothing sent from Britain. American Friends, Red Cross and Salvationists are working in close co-operation. A Shelter for men in the ravaged area is packed every night.

AN HISTORIC HALL

THOSE who know Clapton Congress Hall, London, and their number round the world is legion, will be interested to learn that on the open spaces made by bombing, on either side of the big gates, there are now neat little "pre-fab. houses," with miniature gardens in which lawn grass was springing and a geranium or two were blooming the other day.

The space around these brightly-painted one-story dwellings pre-

THE TERRITORIAL COMMANDER

Returns to the Territorial Centre

THE Commissioner has returned to Territorial Headquarters after a very full program of Congress meetings conducted by him in Newfoundland. One hour after arriving in Toronto he was at his office desk conducting important Conferences, Board meetings, and attending to other matters. other matters.

It may be said that the Territorial Commander has completed almost seven years of incessant and intensseven years of incessant and intensive activity in Canada. As is well known, he served as a Chaplain in World War No. 1 and is therefore deeply interested in the Defence Forces. Notwithstanding the almost insuperable burdens carried by him in the Canadian Command during the whole of World War 2, when he was, of course, responsible for The Salvation Army's many wartime activities, serving as Chairman of the War Board, sending many men and women overseas for Auxiliary Services, giving many lectures men and women overseas for Auxiliary Services, giving many lectures before great public gatherings and Service Clubs on patriotic and Empire matters, the Territorial Leader seems to have retained a boundless supply of energy, and by precept and example continues to lead on successfully.

FROM MANY COUNTRIES

I T now becomes a pilgrimage just to sit in a London meeting and look around (writes John Scrivener in the British War Cry). At General Carpenter's farewell we noted Officers from Africa, Singapore, India, Sweden, Holland, Scotland, the Netherlands Indies, Canada and the United States in a brief moment United States, in a brief moment before the platform party entered.

It was not easy to remember that some of those people crowded into packed chairs, with no one taking any notice of them, were "Big Folk" addressing their own crowds and administering many important matters when at their posts of duty.

serves the added impressiveness given to the Congress Hall facade by the clearing of the old houses which crowded so close to the gates.

ICELANDIC KINDNESS

A COMMUNICATION from Briga-dier Annie Jansson, General Secretary, Iceland, speaks of well-stocked shops. But this El Dorado is spoilt by fantastic prices. The peo-ple, however, are very kind, the shop girls efficient and pleased to go out of their way to answer an inquiry.

Three Faeroes Lieutenants, recently commissioned in Britain, are in Icelandic appointments. They were warmly welcomed. Further reinforcements are expected from

The president of the Corps group, Mrs. McMillan, was in charge of the gathering, and members were presented with Volunteer War Workers' Badges. Mrs. Major G. Dockeray thanked the women for their work during the past years and made special mention of the volunteer canteen workers.

Mrs. Dockeray read Psalm 100 and gave an inspiring address. Sister Mrs. G. Mills sang a pleasing solo.

Credit is due the members of the Springwater and Glanworth groups who worked all during the war years, and who continue to provide clothing and comforts for the distressed people of Europe.

The R.S.W.A. Secretary, Mrs. Lieut.-Colonel Dray, travelled to the Maritimes recently and met many of the splendid R.S.W.A. members in Rallies at various Centres. She was accompanied by Mrs. tres. She was accompanied by Mrs. Major Dixon, of New Brunswick.

Rallies were held in Moncton, Saint John, Woodstock, Fredericton and Sackville where happy and enthusiastic crowds gathered. "It was a thrilling experience to meet with them," states Mrs. Dray, "and a joy to try to express our appreciation for the marvellous job accomplished during the past six years. Many during the past six years. Many women travelled miles to attend the women travelled miles to attend the Rallies. They came by train, car, and sometimes by truck-load. It didn't seem to matter how, as long as they arrived; and every moment was enjoyed." A review of R.S.W.A. activities and the outlining of present urgent needs was followed by the presentation of well-merited Volunteer War Workers' Badges. Well done, New Brunswick! Thank you, Mrs. Major Dixon, and group presidents for your leadership.

NOVA SCOTIA: Accompanied by NOVA SCOTIA: Accompanied by Mrs. Lieut.-Colonel Carruthers, Mrs. Dray spent a most enjoyable and profitable time. Volunteer War Workers' Badges were presented in Halifax, later in Truro, where the women who assisted at Debert Camp joined with the local group.

At New Glasgow, Officers and groups from surrounding Corps, gathered for a happy rally which has already been reported. Dartmouth was the scene of the closing Rally of the tour where an interest-ing evening had been arranged. Mrs. Dray appreciated the opportunity of meeting the women who have worked so enthusiastically, so consistently, so unselfishly during these trying years. Mrs. Carruthers, with the presidents of the groups under her direction, are planning for the coming months.

BY THEIR WORDS

(An editorial in the Globe and Mail, Toronto)

THE delegate to the Methodist Conference who demanded that preachers again use delegate to the British the old-fashioned word, "sin," in their sermons, put his finger on a weak spot in modern life. His contention was that phrases like "moral laxity" and "moral delinquency," soften the condemnation carried by "rip"." They great of the same things "sin." They speak of the same things, but more indulgently. It is not the first time the matter has been raised, and it is usually dismissed as the bleat of a frustrated moralist who hates to see people happy. There is more to it than that.

One can judge the age and moral quality of a civilization by the way it talks. When it possesses vigor, self-assurance and a sense of destiny, its people are direct to the point of ruthlessness. They have little patience with the nicely turned phrase, or the merely pattern as the merely pattern. tience with the nicely turned phrase, or the merely pretty expression. The spirit shows in every aspect of their lives. In the early days of Greek culture, for instance, architectural columns were Doric—simple, solid shafts, capped with unadorned blocks of stone. They were made to carry weight, and nobody was in doubt about it. By the time of the Roman Empire, however, these columns had been replaced by the Corinthian style, light and airy in form, capped by cushions of lacy sculpture. It was as if their builders were ashamed that there had to be columns, and made them look as much as possible like something else.

Many other examples might be cited to show the transition from the simple and direct in a vigorous civilization to the complex and evasive of more effete days. It is an evidence of softness. Consider how seldom the word "stern" may be apseldom the word "stern" may be applied to a man in these days. People are afraid to say "death" to-day. They prefer "passed away." They are not buried, they are interred. Businesses seldom go bankrupt. They are "reorganized." "Charity" goes to no greater extreme than in our legislative hodies, where the old vigor islative bodies, where the old vigor and forthrightness of debate is almost gone. The members no longer say what they mean, but invent anaemic phrases to avoid offense to petty vanity. Newspapers have become as bad.

It is a sign of intellectual flabbi-ness. People hate to face reality, and invent words to soften it. Using false words, they learn to think in lies. Learning to think in lies, they tolerate dedeptions and hyprocisy. It shows in their disrespect for law; in the timidity of their Governments. It shows in their acceptance of imita-tions; their admiration of easy suc-

The ancients knew the value and importance of words more than one religion identified the Word with Deity itself. Men tamper with words and their meanings at their peril. Life will not be mocked by evasion.

WASTERS TIME

Hours of Energy Spent on Fleeting Pursuits

RE you one of those rushed

RE you one of those rushed women who never has time to do all the things she would like to do?

Do you gaze with wonder and admiration at those energetic women who seem to be able to squeeze twice as many hours of accomplishment into the day and night?

If you can't ever seem to finish your tasks — perhaps you are not busy enough. Don't think that judgment too contradictory.

It is based on the old, but true adage, that if you have anything you want done, give it to a busy man to accomplish.

There are women who waste hours

There are women who waste hours and energy trying on dresses that they know they cannot afford, or hats that they would never have the courage to wear.

They shop and try on and return, wasting not only their time, but that of employees of the store.

Intidiness wastes time—the cloth-that of employees of the store.

Untidiness wastes time—the clothing that needs mending that is handled over and over again, the tumble-over drawers that baffle the seeker after any of its contents, the bits and pieces placed carelessly about the house with which a woman must play hide and seek, when rushed for time.

The purse filled with an accumulation of odds and ends that would put to shame a small boy's pockets, that results in wasted minutes in street-cars and shops.

Idle conversation is a most flag-

Idle conversation is a most flag-rant time killer. Those minutes spent on the telephone or over the back yard fence in long gossip-bouts—could well be spent in giving words of comfort and cheer to some-one who is ill or bereaved.

one who is ill or bereaved.

Those minutes wasted in long detailed accounts of your illness or operation, your family problems, or the high cost of living, that really interests no one but yourself, could be spent in moulding the lives of those precious children which God has given you, after the Divine pattern, so that they will grow up to be worth-while citizens and devoted Christian men and women.what a challenge motherhood is to women!

Some women waste time in their social life. If all the time wasted in women's clubs or business meetings, women's clubs or business meetings, while one member after the other takes the floor to express the same inimitable matter in her own way, were placed end to end, months could be saved every year for bigger and better results.

Time is either the most valuable or the most useless of possessions. Some women have too much—their days seem endless and their lives days seem endless and their lives too long. Others never catch up with their plans and aims from birth until their final minute.

Let us remember that we have but one life—and it will soon be past and only the time we spend in doing things for God will last.

Eva Rose York in the symphony, "I shall not pass this way again," conveys the thought that we shall pass through life but once. There is no getting around it—life is a one-way trip and it behooves each one of us to make the best of it for God.

May your determination, so far as your time is concerned, be summed up in the following verse of Eva

"I love the beauty of the scene, Would roam again o'er field so green;
But since I may not, let me

My strength (time) for others to the end—

For those who tread on rock and stone,

And bear their burdens all alone,

Who loiter not in leafy bowers, Nor hear the birds nor pluck the flowers,

A larger kindness give to me,
A deeper love and sympathy;
Then, O one day may someone say—

Remembering a lessened pain—
'Would she could pass this way again.'"

Seeing with the fingers is not an easy task but an accomplished one. As can be seen by the picture above, a blind "Miss" produces a beautiful rug on a hand loom. She knows where to find the color desired as boxes containing the materials are always arranged in the same order

MEETING THE CRISIS

ON a Spring day in 1927 Annie Louise Kellar, a teacher in a one-room country school-house, looked through an open window and saw a storm approaching. She knew what kind of storm it was — a tornado.

She saw to it that all the children were hidden under the desks. A powerful blast of wind blew the door open. Miss Kellar shut the door and lay against it on the floor. Two of the children ran to her, and she shielded them with her body. The tornado demolished school-house. Notwithstanding this, every child was alive and unin-jured, but the teacher was dead beneath a beam from which she had shielded the tots. For Annie Louise Kellar a crisis came and was grandly met and came and was grandly met and with a noble spirit, a self-forget-fulness, and a desire to protect and save those committed to her charge.

Sooner or later the big moment comes to every human being. It may be a crisis where a life hangs on a thread, a moral standard is at stake, or a deep disappointment blights. The stupendous thing is not the event itself, but how one meets it.

HOME LEAGUE NOTES

By the TERRITORIAL HOME LEAGUE SECRETARY, -BRIGADIER A. FAIRHURST

S PECIAL meetings for women will be conducted by Mee Delegation conducted by Mrs. Daisy Basham, a Home Leaguer and noted radio personality from New Zealand now touring the United States and Canada, at the following centres: Hamilton, August 8; London, August 9; Toronto, August 12.

The meetings in each place will commence at 8 p.m. with the Territorial Home League Secretary, Brigadler A. Fairhurst, presiding at London and Hamilton, and the Territorial President, Mrs. Colonel A. Layman, presiding at the Toronto gathering.

It is anticipated that crowds of League of Mercy workers, Home League and Red Shield Women's Auxiliary members will avail themselves of the privilege to meet and hear this outstanding visitor.

Mrs. Lieut.-Colonel Ursaki, of the London-Windsor Division, sends an interesting report of Home Leagues in her Division. She mentions the Home League at Petrolia where Envoy Mrs. Bench is in charge. Mrs. Bench is a hard worker and loved by her women. The Home Guide indicates careful planning. It is neatly typed on colored cardboard, and allows for one sewing, one education, one project, and one spiritual meeting each month. Mrs. Ursaki conducted the spiritual meeting at this centre recently.

Further highlights from Mrs. Ursakl's report include interesting events at Chatham, It is good news to know that the man converted on Home League Sunday night, who was a drink-addict, is standing true and testifying. No doubt the personal interest, not least of which was the hot coffee served in the Quarters by Mrs. Adjutant Sharp that Sunday night, helped.

Thirty-five bath towels and face-cloths, given to benefit an Old People's Home, following a fire when the institution was burned down and the inmates lost their belongings, was a kind gesture. Goderich, is progressing, Mrs, Major Corbett recently gave the League an address on the women of India, and on a recent afternoon, members received aster plants. A prize will be given for the choicest bloom in the Fall.

Stratford and St. Mary's Home Leagues

recently paid neighborly calls, and new nembers have been welcomed at both centres. It is good to know that Stratford has sent three boxes to Holland and two to Britain in recent months.

Mrs. Ursaki presided over a special united program at London II Corps. Windsor seems to be having some showers, one for a member moving into a new home and another "stork" shower for a veteran's wife. Home League Secretary Mrs. Crosby, assisted by members of the Home League, have been doing a splendid work over a period of months in assisting a blind lady. Two days a week the home is visited, meals prepared, the house cleaned, and then time is spent reading to the blind lady and cheering her up. This is real Home cheering her up. League work!

News of parcels to Holland and acknowledgments from Holland are most encouraging. But more news of this project will be coming next week.

It was good to see Major and Mrs. Church and Jean and Gwen arriving at the Union Depot, and to witness the welcome from relatives, including Mrs. Church's mother, Mrs. Brown, who is far from well. Major and Mrs. Church have been away thirteen years in East Africa and we hope to see and hear something of them in coming weeks.

The day following, Mrs. Major Mellveney and her daughter, Shirley, passed through to Medicine Hat, Major Mell-veney is still waiting passage and it is hoped his journey back to China can be via Canada. The family were in a coucentration camp over three years. On the day of liberation, the doors were opened and the children of the camp, including four-year-old Shirley, were the first out on the road, but the small ones had to find out the names of such strange beings as cats, dogs and horses in the new world outside.

While we worry about the troubles in the world, are we sufficiently thankful for the victory gained and the peace we enjoy. These dear people are taking another appointment in China.

Accidents in the Home

In one big city accidents in the home caused the death of more than one thousand persons during the first eight months of last year. It is surprising to find that falls are responsible for the great majority of home accidents. More people were killed in this way than in all other ways put together. other ways put together.

The Safety Council finds that the poorly-lighted, or cluttered stairways,, loose stair carpeting, small rugs, grease, and failure to use a firm stepstool or ladder when reaching for high loose and the chief in in stepstool or ladder when reaching for high places are the chief dangers. Not even firearms, poisonous gas, burns or explosions proved as deadly as the apparently simple fall.

The Commissioner served for the next thirty-four years in India and Ceylon. Writing of his experiences, he said: "As a company of Officers we were bound together in love and prevent living only for the glory of prayer, living only for the glory of God and the Salvation of the people. We lived on the simplest Indian food, and our Quarters for each of the ten Corps had only one room, with mud floor and walls, without furniture or even a cot or chair... At the end of the year we had fifty good converts."

During a "boom march" a number of Officers visited a pariah village and held a meeting, at the close of which the whole village knelt in prayer. At the next village thirty families, waked at midnight by the Colvetionists' cornet, drum, tam-Salvationists' cornet, drum, tam-bourine and joyful songs, eagerly accepted Salvation. During the next two weeks similar scenes were witnessed in a dozen or more villages, and 2,000 people sought Salvation. People who knew nothing of Christ and Christianity learned what it meant by the Christlike lives of the Officers.

Appointments took the Commissioner to many parts as Corps Officer, Divisional Officer, Social Secretary and Territorial Commander. The Army's work in India greatly benefited by his indefatigable and unobtrusive but constructive leadership. He was then appointed as Territorial Commander for Korea, and after official retirement in 1925 became Territorial Commander (protem) for Kenya.

Special instructors added to the usefulness and pleasure of the Camp. Mr. Richard Dick, of Winnipeg, showed a special film depicting life in Newfoundland. Mr. Clark, of the University of Manitoba, devoted some time to instruction in astronomy. Home-nursing was touch in astronomy. Home-marsing was taught by the Camp Nurse, Mrs. Sut-ton, and progress was made by the girls in swimming under the capable instruction of Mrs. Flatt. Those assisting were Captain Ferguson, Lieutenant Sweitzer, Grace Parliament, Joy Lee, Mrs. Hendrie, Mae Kelly, and Mrs. John Durham, of North Toronto.

A memorable feature was the Candle-light service when a torch was lit representing Guide Camps of the past, and a torch representing the present camp was lit, the Guides repeating their Law and Promise.

Under the supervision of the Divisional Commander, Major R. Gage, the Cubs had an interesting and profitable time. Games, incorporating Cub Tests, campfires and sing-songs were highlights.

The day's activities concluded with a sing-song at the lakeshore, where a goodly crowd, representative of various denominations, unit-ed in singing old hymn favorites under the direction of Major Ross, Camp Superintendent.

While the "grown-ups" enjoyed the special gatherings conducted by the Chief Secretary, "The Grove" rang with lusty singing as Major Reg. Bamsey led the boys of the fresh-air camp in morning devotions.

DIAMOND JUBILEE OF "THE MUSICAL SALVATIONIST"

By Lieut.-Colonel Bramwell Coles, Its Present Editor

A NOTHER musical Diamond Jubilee — the third in four years! In 1943 it was the Music Editorial Department's sixtieth Editorial Department's sixtieth birthday; a year later the Band Journal passed a similar milestone, and now the records inform us that six decades have passed since "The Musical Salvationist" was first issued. For sixty long years this sued. For sixty long years this musical magazine has been coming off the printing machines with its songs of Salvation which have winged their way to all parts of the world.

That is easily said, but you have only to let your imagination have a little play to conjure up all that it means. First, what do the historical records tell us about the birth of the magazine? Just a brief glance at these chronicles.

In 1886 the Band Journal was going merrily; the experimental stage had passed and the regular issue was in being. But so far there had not been any equally urgent demand to produce vocal music for Army use. At that time Songster Brigades, use. At that time Songster Brigades, as we know them to-day, had not come into existence. Apart from congregational singing, almost the only other form of vocal music in The Army was that of the solo.

At Clapton, however, in connection with what was then called the "Training Home," a remarkable Singing Brigade from among the Cadets was formed by the Principal, Herbert Booth. The Music Department was under his authority at that time, and its office was located on part of the Congress Hall property.

Herbert Booth - himself a real genius in creating poetry and melo-dies suitable for Army use — was quick to see the aid the Music De-partment could be to him in relation to his Cadets' Singing Brigade. The Department was set upon the task of finding, as well as creating, suitable songs for the Brigade's use, and so it contributed in no small degree to the Brigade's spiritual and musical success in its tours to all parts of England, Scotland, and Wales.

These news songs proved so useful that demand for copies soon arose, and groups of eight songs under the title of "Songs of the Singing, Speaking and Praying Brigade" were issued.

One result of these activities was the imparting of a stimulant to Salvationists who felt a leaning toward writing verses and melodies. The Music Department encouraged all such, taking their melodies and supsucn, taking their melodies and supplying harmony when needed; and so, in addition to its own creation of new songs, it was able to gather a good store of vocal material. Many additions were obtained during The Army's first International Congress in 1886.

Then the question arose, could sufficient supplies be obtained to justify the plan for a magazine of vocal music for Army use? Was the creative ability among Salvationisits of sufficient merit and continuity in of sufficient merit and continuity in song-making to make such a venture a success? Some doubts, of course, could but arise, but the first issue of "The Musical Salvationist" appeared in July, 1886. The results justified all hopes in a truly wonderful way; poetic and musical creative ability has been revealed by Salvationists. has been revealed by Salvationists all through the years, so that ample supplies have been secured by the Music Department to make an unbroken issue of the magazine.

But, to leave the historical, what is the purpose which "The Musical Salvationist" set out to serve? We cannot do better than refer to some words spoken by the Father of Salvation Army Music, who founded the magazine and remained its

MUSICAL MISNOMER

"Spanish Chant" Did Not Originate in Spain

Originate in Spain

THE well-known tune, "Spanish Chant" (No 169 in The Salvation Army Tune Book) first found in "A Collection of Psalms and Hymns" made by Montague Burgoyne, the music being edited by J. MacDonald Harris, 1827. It appeared in America a year earlier with the name "Madrid," arranged by Benjamin Carr.

Apparently the air has nothing to do with Spain, nor are there any records of the Spaniards having used it as a chant, or in any other form. It is thought that Heinrich Christopher Zeumer, of Saxony, who later settled in Boston, U.S.A., might have been the composer, as he had a fancy for using the word "chant" in naming his tunes. It belongs to the period, 1795-1857.

The Adjutant is deeply impressed with the spirit of Holland's Salvationists.

Editor until 1913, Lieut.-Colonel Richard Slater said: "Congregational singing must always hold the chief place in Army musical activities; Bands, Songster Brigades, and soloists all are but accessories and of subordinate importance. One purpose of the magazine has been to secure likely tunes to add to the pose of the magazine has been to secure likely tunes to add to the stores of Army congregational music. Such tunes as provide a medium for the expression as well as the creation of decision, courage, joyful aggression, and clear and positive spiritual experience, are of greatest service for The Army's congreatest service for The Army's congregational singing. "The Musical Salvationist" has provided hundreds of such songs. In some instances the words and music are by Army unitary in others classical and nawriters; in others, classical and national melodies have been adapted and set to verses by Salvationists. In this connection it is well to acknowledge the wisdom of the Founder's advocacy of the use of such tunes."

Naturally, with the development of musical appreciation, present-day demands are much greater than in 1886, but the purpose of the magazine remains the same as when the first issue was published.

Proof of words is action; if I can do anything for my fellow-Colonists, just command me. Like Jesus, I serve." His actions did indeed prove his words. A little later, for instance. we saw him carrying home from the meeting on his back, a man, who could no longer walk.

The mother of Jan and Anna, who had such a happy time on their voyage to Holland, was next on her feet. A year after the arrival of the family in Holland, a bright red spot had appeared on the mother's face, and when the doctor had gravely expressed his fears that it was leprosy. an immediate return to Java had been arranged. Need one stress the difference between the two journeys? The heart of the young mother — she was only twenty-five — had been full of gloomy foreboding. She well knew the custom of her people, and it had been no surprise to her when her husband (a high Government official) had asked her to divorce him in order to prevent his losing his position.

At first she had refused, but when he undertook to do his duty by the children—who had been examined and found free from leprosy—and provide for her support, she had agreed to return to her mother's home, where no one knew of her affliction.

For five years that troubled old lady would not hear of parting with her afflicted daughter. Then her son had developed the disease and immediately went to Pelantoengan. At his request, Salvation Army Officers had visited his sister in her home, and persuaded the griefstricken old mother to allow his sister to join him at the Colony. She shared a room with a woman Soldier with a sweet disposition, and eventually this troubled soul was led to the Saviour and found the joy which, with a radiant face, she now expressed in a chorus:

"I'm washed in the Blood of the Lamb!"

The drummer now rose, immediately striking up the chorus:

"Bright crowns there are, Bright crowns laid up on high!"

It was Salim, the ship's boy who had been so often beaten for running after The Army drum, and who as a lad had so evidently desired to obtain one of the "bright crowns" of which the Salvationists sang. After serving six years on ships at sea, and four years as house boy to a Japanese rubber planter, he had returned to Semarang. Here he had been taken sick, and discovered to be a leper. Hearing that the Leper Colony at Pelantoengan was being managed by Salvationists, a great joy filled his heart. He at once decided to go to the Colony.

He learned to understand something of God's great Salvation plan, and in a meeting led by Commissioner Johanna van de Werken, he became a child of God. Now he gave his testimony:

"Hallelujah, God has led me into Light. Now I live to serve God by doing all I can to serve my fellow-sufferers. In a storm at sea the captain of the ship knows just what to do; the passengers are safe in his trained hands. I am like a ship beyond repair, but ours is a skilled Captain, and presently I shall put out to sea once more and safely arrive in the port of Heaven."

The next speaker we remember as Liang, the boy who was almost buried by volcanic ash. His testimony runs:

"When my father died, my mother took me to Djontong where she earned our living by sewing, and

I was sent to school. Later, when I was working in a shop, my face broke out in sores. My employer said: 'You must have leprosy, you had better leave.' When my saddened mother told my grandfather this news, he was very angry and took me to a doctor for examination. The doctor told my grandfather what medicine to buy for me, and he sold his possessions in order to procure these. But when the money was finished, I was no better. My mother grieved so greatly over me that before long she died. That was the greatest sorrow I had known! When my grandfather's money was all spent, and he could no longer pay a doctor or buy medicines, he advised me to enter a Leper Colony. So, sick in heart and body, I left my grandfather's home.

"A Gospel message I heard read shortly after arriving at the Colony cheered me greatly, and brought to my heart the first real comfort I had known. I was enabled to forget my sickness and sorrow to a certain extent, and I learned how to pray to God through our Lord Jesus. Later, I received His pardon and peace. I have been here for many years; and The Army Officers have been tireless in trying to help and bless the patients. I pray that this good work may be extended to the thousands of lepers still unloved and uncared for.

JOY, FREEDOM, PEACE

Tune: "Old Folks at Home"

freedom, peace and ceaseless blessing,

All, all for thee,

, while your weakness still confessing, To your Redeemer you flee.

All the world can ne'er console thee, Cannot bring thee joy; Jesus alone can satisfy thee;

He will thy sorrow destroy.

JOY, dearer than a thousand treasures Wilt thou receive.

Jesus will deal it without measure If in His power you believe.

FREE from your doubts and fears for

Will you not be?

Jesus those chains of doubts will sever. If you this freedom would see.

PEACE, flowing calmly as a river Now you may find; From all your troubles He'll deliver, While to His will you're resigned.

Brings tidings from afar, Of nations in commotion, Prepared for Zion's war.

NEARLY everyone knows the Rev. Samuel F. Smith as the author of "My Country, "Tis of Thee," but few are aware that the glorious missionary hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking," also came from his pen came from his pen.

Both hymns were written in 1832, the year Mr. Smith was graduated from Andover Theological Seminary and entered the Baptist ministry.

and entered the Baptist ministry. Certainly in the years that followed there was nothing in the young preacher's career to suggest concealment. Soon after entiring the ministry he was called to the editorship of the "Baptist Missionary Magazine." Thus, at the very beginning of his ministry, Christian missions won his interest, and his ever-growing zeal for world evangelization not only inspired his popular missionary hymn but influenced his entire life. his entire life.

In 1834 he accepted a call to the pastorate of a Baptist Church at Waterville, Me., and eight years later he began a similar ministry in Newton, Mass. In the end he returned to his first love—missionary service—and became editor of the publications of the American Bappublications of the American pap-tist Missionary Union.

This work took him abroad for visits at a number of foreign mis-sion outposts and years later he was able to tell of hearing his hymn sung in many of these far-away stations. In a letter written in 1883, he said: "It is a favorite among Christian people. I have heard versions of it sung in Karen, Burman, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish, Ger-man and Telegu."

The new missionary song was first "Hastings' Spiritual Songs" which appeared in 1832. Eleven years later, Smith included it in a collection of hymns entitled, "The Psalmist," which he and a friend prepared for Appeared Part Appears for American Baptists.

The hymn tune was written by George James Webb, distinguished English organist, who came to America as a young man to make his home in Boston. Webb, it is said, wrote the music during the ocean crossing to the United States. The tune was composed for secular words and with no idea that it would some day be a favorite hymn tune. tune.
